

Turning Wood Waste into Cash Flow

Helping farmers and forest owners realize the maximum value of their wood waste in the renewable fuels market.

Co-op Model

Our model supports bioenergy co-ops owned by farmers and forest landowners, a novel idea in this past century of energy oligopoly and market domination. Each plant will be independently owned and operated with Yosemite Clean providing the marketing, off-take, and management of the downstream supply chain.

New Market Revenue Streams

The co-op format helps farmers and forest owners focus on their principal business while providing a new revenue stream and access to market gains in the fuels industry. Our model puts the farmers and forest landowners in an excellent position to improve farm value and annual revenues to support farm redevelopment.

Flexible Planning and Pooling

Once a member, farmers and forest owners will have the option to sell wood over a 15-20 year period. Members will have the flexibility to hold back on producing each year based upon a method of supply planning that involves trading, and outsourcing if necessary, to meet quota. Just like many quota systems in ag, this will provide the member certainty of selling their waste streams and a guaranteed revenue stream from biomass. Biomass shipped to the plant will receive a delivery pool payment and then as fuels are produced from the wood, and sold, the owners will receive progress payments until each pool closes.

“Stump to Pump” Services

Yosemite Clean charges customary development fees to secure the land, complete permitting, and develop engineering plans to support each project. Once a plant is commissioned, the Yosemite will receive a royalty on all produced and sold energy from each plant. Our team and technology partners offer complete development services including engineering, financing, land acquisitions, permits, civil engineering, construction, and turn-key plant operations and management that will provide from “stump to pump” services.

Review a Customized Prospectus

Yosemite Clean, can set up a meeting to review the potential farmer or forest landowner’s needs and annual biomass supply availability and can show the farmer the value of joining our independently owned co-ops.
